MOVING INTO THE EIGHTIES

1980 was indeed a momentous year full of political drama and natural disasters. Americans witnessed the tumult of a presidential election, the drawn out anguish of the hostages, and the most awesome image of all: the mighty volcanic eruption that tore off the top of Mount St. Helens. There were shining moments too. Against incredible odds, the U.S. Olympic Hockey Team captured a gold medal by defeating the Russians. There was the return of six Americans who escaped from Iran and a surge of good feeling toward Canada, which hid them and smuggled them home. From nearly a billion miles away, Voyager I sent back amazing pictures of the braided rings of Saturn.

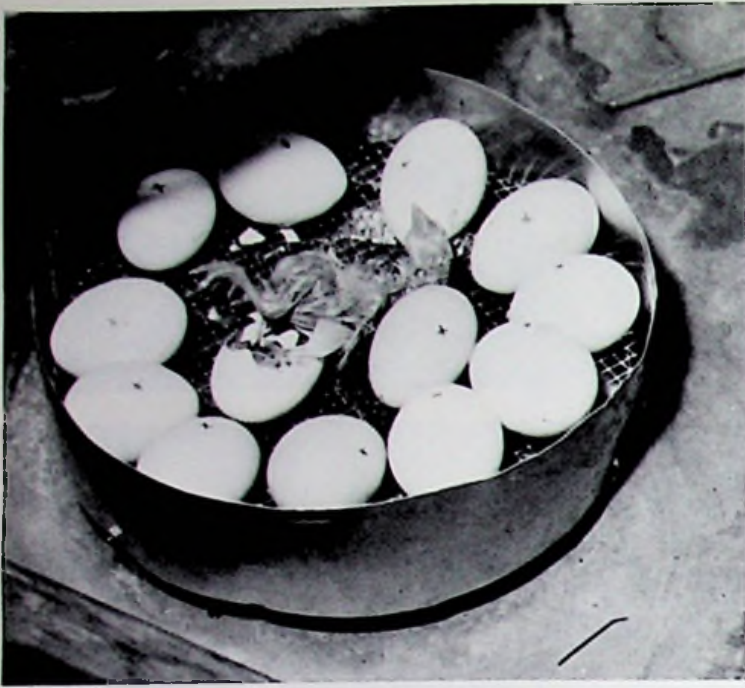

The first year of the new decade held many surprises. There was the time when all of America thought Edward Kennedy clearly had the Democratic nomination for the asking. Things weren't always what they seemed. Jimmy Carter lost his bid for a second term, and Ronald Reagan, our newly elected president, was named Man of the Year by Time.

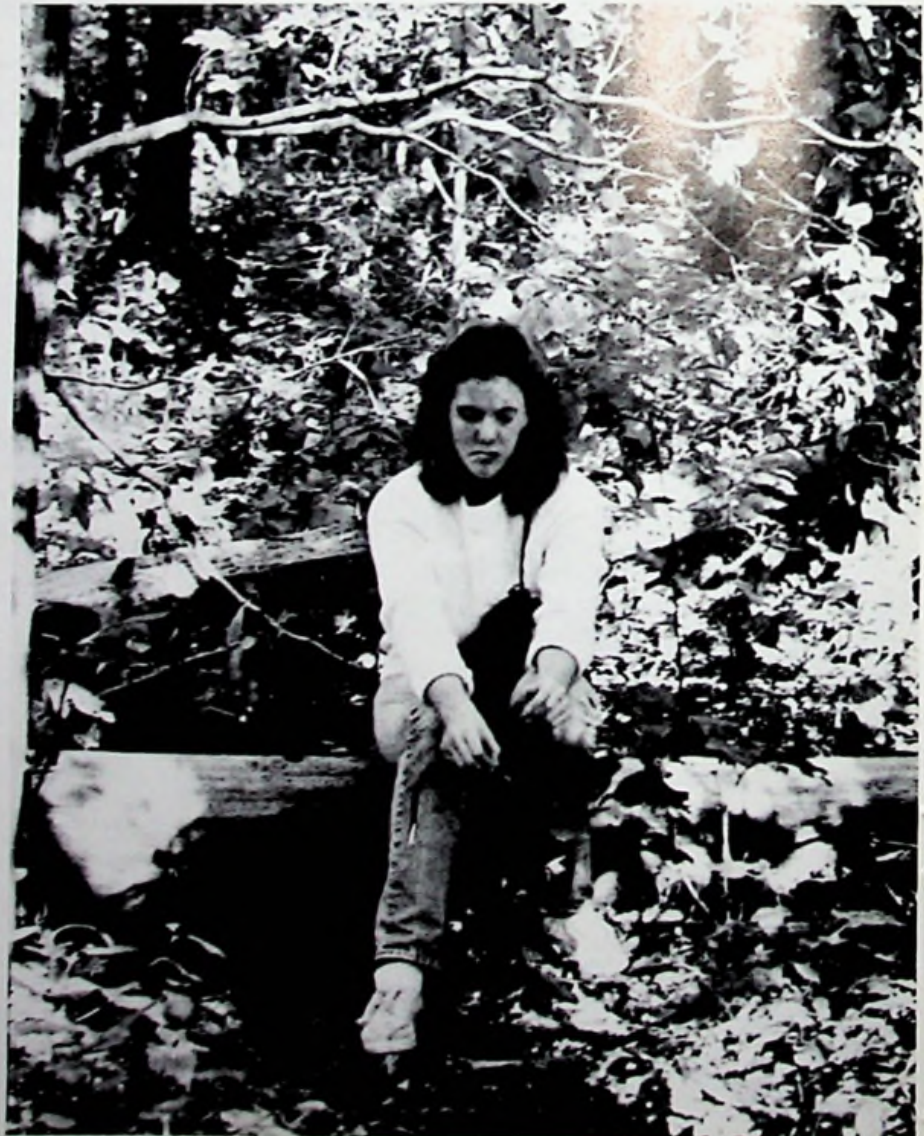

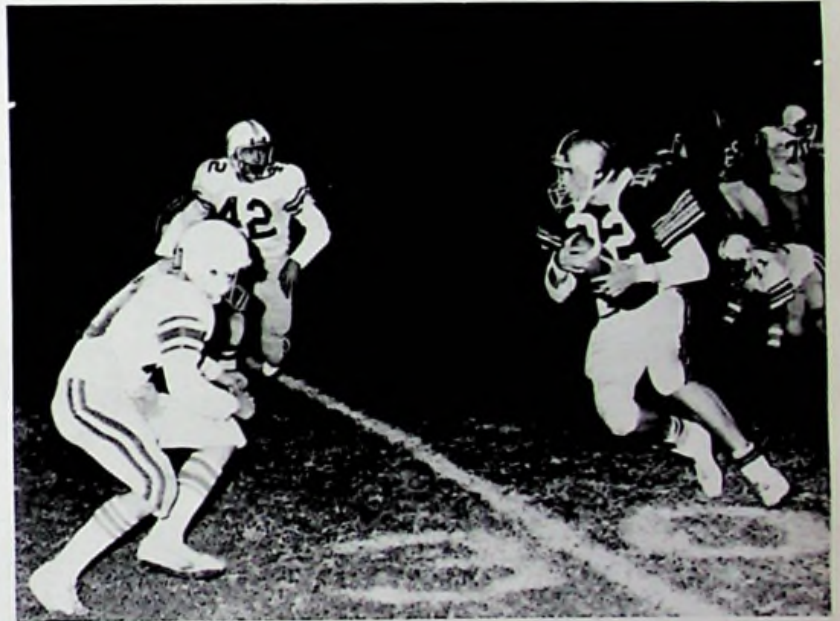

In the hallways and the classrooms we wondered who shot J.R. Ewing. Inevitably someone somewhere could be found singing "Another One Bites the Dust." Still a favorite was "Saturday Night Live" providing students with a variety of expressions: I'm sure; not too cool. We talked about The Talking Heads and the B-52's; few of us mourned the death of disco.

From the midst of the '50's came the Preppie look: tartans, madras, monograms, topsiders and ribbon ties. A few of us even went to such extremes as to purchase The Preppie Handbook. Of course, it was also desirable to own a pair of designer jeans. We topped our Calvin Klein's with Izod shirts. See you later alligator.

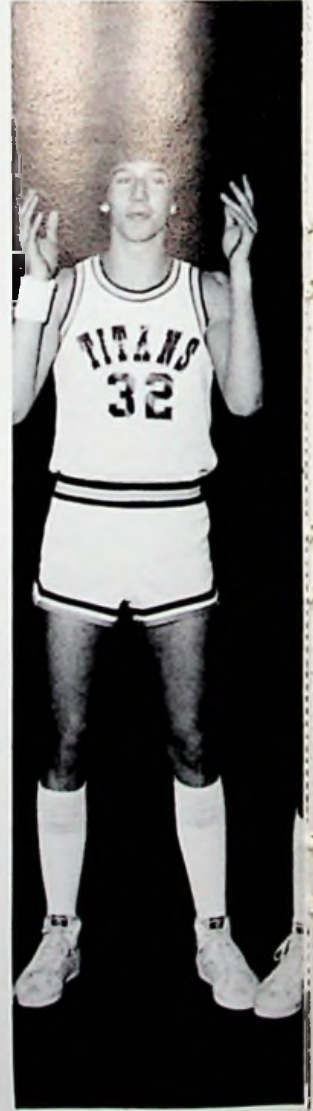

At Notre Dame, there was plenty to cheer about. Construction got underway for a new addition to the building which will house several classrooms. The football team claimed the S.O.C. Division I Title, and the girls basketball team enjoyed its best season thus far. Our volleyball coach, Maureen Martin, was named Coach of the Year and the reserve basketball team had a super season.

For what will 1980 be remembered? The re-match between Sugar Ray Leonard and Roberto Duran; Abscam; Eric Heiden skating his way to five gold medals; Genuine Risk; Bjorn Borg winning his fifth Wimbledon; Shogun; the untimely and violent death of John Lennon; The Empire Strikes Back; "Sailing".
